

Extraordinary Leaders Award || MZEO

The salaries of public servants are unsustainable and speak of mental bias on behalf of citizens, who do not care about their leaders. The psychological pressures of managing billions or trillions of euros but not being awarded even 10% of what bankers earn, who often manage far less capital, and have smaller positive contribution to society.

Such injustice creates graft, nepotism, sadness, biases leaders, and hurt the wellbeing in many ways, each year, many times over. We do appreciate the sacrifice and the hard work of our public leaders and advocate that these positions are properly compensated with assets that make life higher-quality and increase the ability of these amazing people to increase their impact while perennially preserving their integrity.

Mzeo, with its Club for Presidents of Local Communities has proven the power of abstract rewards or even monetary ones, to stimulate leaders of local communities to be more motivated and do more for the public wellbeing. Why such rewards, monetary ones too, shouldn't be given to leaders on higher levels after they leave their highly revered positions?

Mzeo seeks to raise enough funds to allocate at least 10 million USD each year to leaders in 9 different categories, 1 million USD for 8 prizes and $2 million USD for one prize that pertains to contribution towards a positive evolution of mankind. Prizes are available after they leave their positions.

1. Extraordinary leader of Latin America
2. Extraordinary leader of North America
3. Extraordinary leader of Europe
4. Extraordinary leader of Africa
5. Extraordinary leader of Asia and Pacific
6. Extraordinary leader of South Asia
7. Extraordinary leader in sciences and promoting education
8. Extraordinary leader in promoting ethics and moral development
9. Extraordinary in facilitating positive human evolution ($2 million)

These rewards would be allocated with measurable KPIs that are set and measured by international bodies such as UN, the UN Agencies, and the World Bank. Only the biggest prize of $2 million would be qualitative and would include more areas that require multilinear assessment. This would be decided by people who already got Mzeo award based on at least 3 proposals by the Mzeo organization.

We believe that these rewards would impact the awareness and motivation that would transcend into measurable and enormous positive impact in society wherein citizens return their trust in governments, and governments return their trust in citizens.

We are currently fundraising for at least 10 years of these awards, that can be paid annually, and we hope this expense, to become part of the UN's normal annual budget allocation onward or even today.
